NEGROES ARE NOT IMMUNE

Eight Have the Yellow Fever at Edwards, Mississippi

POSTAL AGENT FALLS A VICTIM

The Situation is Worse at Mobile and Commercial Club Forming a Relief Committee.

By Wire to THE TELEGRAM.

Mobile, Ala. Oct 2.—The case of yellow fever reported here yesterday on State Street was a man who guarded an infected district. He carried the infection into the northern part of the city, where many of the poorer people dwell. The Commercial club called a meeting today to form a relief committee to assist the unemployed. A suspicous case has been reported in the heart of the city, G. F. Steiner on Emanuel street.

Four cases are reported at St, Elmo twenty miles south of Mobile, and a suspicious case at Grand Bay.

How it is in Various Towns.

Ocean Springs, Miss. Oct. 2.—The postal agentwas taken off the train at Fontainebleau last night sick, and placed in the camp hospital. A man named Levi, from Biloxi, is sick at the same place. Dr. Kolls, of Scranton has been taken sick and brought to the hospital.

Two new cases are also reported from McHenry.

Yellow Fever Attacks Negroes.

Edwards, Miss, Oct. 2.—Nineteen new cases of Yellow fever were reported here this morning. Eleven of of the sufferers are white people, and eight are negroes.

Last Night of The Show.

There was the usual large crowd and the usual merriment at Dr. Blue Mountain Joe's show at West's park last night. The doctors show is amusing and clean at the same time, and the patronage he has received is very flattering. The nightly change of program, makes it possible for the same people to attend, and enjoy each performance. Eddie McDade is one of the best darkey comedians onthe stage and his appearance is always the signal for roars of laughter.

The program tonight will be best yet presented. The capable orchestra will render some fine selection, and the specialties will be new and mirth provoking.

The overture by the orchestra wil be a popular medley with eight pieces. This will be followed by the laughable comedy, "Boy Tommy," with McDade in his favorite role of black servant. This will be followed by songs, dances and the bounding rope act. There will also be high tumbling, character songs and contortion feats. The McDade brothers will give a sparring match under Marquis of Queensbury rules.

The performance will conclude with the side-spliding comedy, "The Irish Ball," with McDade as "Casey, the Piper."

Prices of admission are, adults, 20 cents; children under 12 years old, 10 cents.

Those who have not seen the show should not miss this chance to see it at its best, and those who have know what to expect.

Greek Cabinet Resigns.

Athens, Oct. 1. — The Premier, M. Ralli, this morning officially tendered the resignation of the cabinet ministers, and they were accepted by King George.

All the newspapers, with the exception of the Delyannist organs, express the deepest discontent with the crisis. The Asty declares that the Chamber has accomplished a shameful betrayal, by planning party interests before the interests of the country.

King George has invited M. Suinos to form a cabinet. M. Suinos is a member of the Delyannis party and hesitates to undertake the task. His acceptance would cause a split among the Delyannists.

Campos Thinks the Cabinet Need Not be Dissolved in Order to a Change of Policy—Other Foreign News.

London, Oct. 2.—A dispatch received here from Madrid, says that Captain General Weyler, has finally been recalled from Cuba. The announcement followed a long conference between Martinez Campos, the predecessor of Weyler in Cuba, and the Queen-Regent of Spain, and is regarded as significant.

Campos is reported to have declared that in his opinion a change of Spains policy toward Cuba is possible, without a dissolution of the present Cabinet.

Weyler's successor has not been officially announced as yet, though it is not at all improbable that General Campos may be selected a second time to command the Spanish forces in Cuba.

THE VALUE OF THE EXPERT.

It has not been many years since the value of expert opinion was absurdly overestimated; if the present tendency continues, it will not be many years before it will be greatly underestimated. Who will be responsible for the change? In the main the expert himself.

The expert is of all men one of the most vain. He knows a great deal about his specialty, but he is too often unwilling that people should find out that he does not know everything; he pretends to know, sometime, what he does not know; he is caugh tand doubt is straightway thrown upon what he does know well enough. He has in the past found a popular opinion, ready made to his hand, that is inclined to exaggerate his attainments and he has taken advantage of it; today he is beginning to suffer from the inevitable reaction. The expert is coming to be jocularly considered, one of the surest signs of a waning faith. He along with the tramp, the snob and the Southern darkey is to become the staple food of the comic paper.

Like all other classess, too the expert suffers from the effects of the spurious interloper, the man who claims to be an expert but has never taken the infinite pains in mastering details that alone makes the expert's opinion worth anything; there is also, the man who claims to be an expert for a consideration.

The expert, like all other men, is liable to be mistaken at times. He is only a man of wide experience and fine training applying his knowledge to an individual case in his specialty. But whether it be the diagnosis of a disease, the identification of a handwriting or a specimen in biology there may be peculiarities in the individual case, that set all his experience and his training at naught. It is only the old case of the fallibility of human conclusions; but the expert occupies the unfortunate position of being liable to lose by one wrong conclusion, the reputation that has accrued from a hundred right conclusions.

It has grown into a proverb that doctors disagree, and the expert seems likely to fall heir to the same saying. It would be easy to multiply instances of this. Let an expert, in any given line, advance an opinion, and another expert of equal weight can be found to contradict him. The history of expert testimony has shown this time and again. As a matter of fact the lawyer more than any one else, is responsible for the downfall of the expert. He has set experts by the ears, time out of number, and has again and again made the expert stultify himself before judge and jury. In the noted murder trial now in progress in Chicago the experts employed have contradicted each other point blank, and one found himself in the somewhat embarrassing position of having identified a monkey's skull as that of a man.

The truth of the business is, expert testimony has been so abused in the courts as to be almost valueless. Too much has been expected of the expert and in the attempt to come up to expectations he inevitably runs a foul of of opposing counsel, who are lying in wait for him. The results are decidedly unpleasant for the expert.

At the beginning of the present yellow fever epidemic, the experts sent to the scene differed, in a number of cases, with the local physicians, some of whom were possessed of a wide practical experience with yellow fever. There are not lacking people who say that in many instances the experts were wrong. This has happened before, and is likely to happen again, unless the expert shall learn to appraise himself more accurately.

It is largely a day of experts and it would be difficult to cast up accounts and find his true value as a factor in our economy, but the sooner he ceases to claim infallibility, or to allow others to claim it for him the better, for him and for others.

THE decision of a Federal Judge that the anti-cigarette law in Tennessee is unconstitutional, will not tend to put him and his colleagues in better esteem. It may be according to the law, but it seems a pity that every attempt made by the state to remedy an evil should be brought to naught by a decision of some Federal Judge. If this sort of business goes much further, limiting the power of the Federal judiciary will be a burning question in national politics at no distant day. There is no escape from the fact that as matters stand a single judge has more power than the people of an entire state. This will not be borne quietly for very long.

MR. FIFE complains that the speeches of certain prominent gentlemen have been reported, while his opening prayer on the same occasion was not. The reporter merely failed to understand to whom Mr. Fife was addressing his prayer.

THE vehemence and earnestness with which Tammany delegates swapped fisticuffs in their late convention should assure Ohio Populists that their example was not wasted on a non appreciative public.

WHILE the government is building dry docks it might, as a precaution, construct one for the Ship of State: there have been some evidences of late years that a little overhauling would not hurt her.

FOR the benefit of those readers who do not follow public events closely it may be worth while to explain that "Wilhelm de Grosse" is a steamship and not the German Emperor.

SATURDAY'S LITERARY CHAT.

[All books and magazines mentioned below may be had at Wharton's book store.]

The cloven hoof protrudes in this installment of the "War of the Worlds" in the Cosmopolitan—Mr. Wells wishes to preach against vivisection. Why can't the novelists give us our fiction and sermons in separate doses? Both are excellent separately but do not mix over well. Grant Allen in the same magazine — Grant Allen, the "Hill Top" novelist—kindly favors a waiting public with his views of "Modern College Education." When Mr. Allen says that "College education as we know it today is mostly a matter of the dead languages, particularly Latin," we can take a pretty accurate measure of his qualifications for discussing his theme, without reading further. If Mr. Allen would kindly ascend his "hill top" a few paces higher he might be able to see that Latin in all the leading institutions of this country is not more emphasized than mathematics, the sciences or modern languages. A man may take his degree in many of them without knowing the difference in DICO and DUCO if he be foolish enough to wish it. A long enstallment of Julien Gordon's new serial, "Mrs. Clyde," appears and promises well for the story. For some reason this number of the magazine has no poetry. The most unique contribution is a character study of Aaron Burr from the pen of Edgar Fawcett. It contains much that is new about that remarkable personality.

***

Not one of the least attractions of Scribner's for October is the artistic front cover. The "Wreck of Greece," by Henry Norman, is able, pointed and timely, though the number of pictures of the royal family of Greece smacks somewhat of the Sunday newspapers. The article should do much to set right the popular conception of the Graeco-Turkish war and the events leading up to it. "The Business of a Great Newspaper," by Lincoln Steffens, is an excellent exposition of the workings of the complicated machinery that must underlie the successful metropolitan daily. The fiction of the number is excellent. The poem, "The Frigate-Ghost," by Helen Gray Cone, is worthy of Rudyard Kippling and is as American as Kippling's poems are English. There is the same bold, free swing to it both in thought and expression that characterizes the work of the author of Barrack-room Ballad's" and the "Seven Seas."

***

A new weekly journal entitled Literature is to be published in England by the London Times, and in America by Harper & Brothers. Its first number will appear late in October. Continental, as well as English literature is to be reviewed. Mr. H. D. Traill will be the editor.

***

Rudyard Kipling has written a new volume of stories, to be published next spring.

***

Weyman's Shrewsbury" will not be published until next spring, when Anthony Hope's "Simon Dale," a tale of Nell Gwynn, will also appear.

***

"Hawthorne's First Diary" has just come to light. It was kept by him during his residence at Raymond, Me.

***

A tale of the Siege of Detroit has been written by Colonel H. R. Gordon in "Pontiac, Chief of the Ottawas." It was the dream of Pontiac, as it had been of King Philip, nearly a century before, to unite all his race in a war of extermination against the pale faces. "The Englishmen, said he, "have conquered the French, and now they will turn on us and make us their slaves, but that shall never be." In his conspiracy Pontiac had under his immediate control the Ottawas, Ojibwas, Pottawatomies and Wyandots, Colonel Gordon's story introduces us to French Canadians as well as savages, to scouters, trappers and to brave backwoods women. In the romance Pontiac seeks to win a pale-face queen.

***

Max Pemberton's forthcoming Munsey serial is entitled, "A Woman of Kronstadt."

***

The publication of M. Daudet's new novel, "Soutien de Famille," a work on which he has been engaged for a considerable time, is indefinitely postponed. It is, of course, an open secret that the author of "Jack" has drawn very extensively on contemporary history for the plots of his various novels, and it is understood that "Soutien de Famille" contains the life history of two well known Parisians. He has in this instance decided not to publish the book during the lifetime of his hero.

At His Old Tricks Again.

The snake editor of the Charlotte News delivers himself of the following:

"Mr. J. Calvin Hoover is most unfortunate from the standpoint of the man afraid of snakes, and a lucky one from the snake killer's point of view. Some weeks ago he found a venomous spreading adder between his feet, in the Methodist cemetery. He felt something soft under his foot. He looked down and was horrified to see a wad of snake under his shoes. He jumped and the snake crawled off. On this same lot, two years ago, he killed sixty-seven snakes in one day.

Mr. Winslow Resigns.
